CENTRAL LINN GRADUATES: WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

The Wellhouser Brothers of Brownsville

By Sharon K. Banks, Staff Writer

Craig and Jeffrey Wellhouser grew up on a quiet stretch of Gap Road in Brownsville, where the family home once bustled with activity and laughter. They are the sons of the late Fred and Jan "Speedy" Wellhouser, names fondly remembered by many in the Central Linn community.

Fred was a Vietnam Navy veteran who worked for 30 years for the Burlington Northern Railroad. He retired to become a farmer and was known for his generosity and a heart "as big as a house." Jan, affectionately nicknamed "Speedy," taught at Central Linn High School from 1978 to 1994, inspiring countless students before her passing. Though both parents are gone, their legacy clearly lives on through their sons — two brothers who have dedicated their lives to public service and family.

Only sixteen months apart, Craig and Jeffrey shared a close bond growing up — a bond that continued into their nearly parallel careers in law enforcement.

Craig, the elder brother, graduated from Central Linn High School in 1992 before attending Linn-Benton Community College. He went on to Western Oregon State, earning a Bachelor of Science in Law Enforcement. Though he dreamed of becoming a State Trooper, a hiring freeze at the time re-routed his path.

In 1998, Craig began his law enforcement career with the Portland Police Department, serving for two years before joining the Forest Grove Police Department. By 2004, he moved to the Cornelius Police Department, where he worked until the department merged with the Washington County Sheriff's Office in 2014. Craig continues to serve there today, with just four years left until retirement. His plan? To move back home to Brownsville, where it all began.

Craig has been married to Carrie for 20 years. Together, they've built a close-knit family that includes stepdaughter Stephanie and her husband Alex, who have two daughters, Phoebe, 13 and Cheyenne, 10. Stephanie is currently pursu-

CONNECT LINN COUNTY

First-Ever Harvest Festival Court

This year's Connect Linn County Harvest Festival will debut a brand-new tradition: the first-ever Harvest Festival Court. Inspired by a community suggestion, this creative and inclusive program celebrates service, teamwork, and fun across generations.

Unlike traditional pageant-style courts, the Connect Linn County (CLC) Harvest Festival Court is open to participants of all ages and encourages self-expression. Members can dress in anything from formal attire to festive costumes or something entirely unique as they represent the community throughout the year.

The 2025-26 court begins this October and concludes at next year's Harvest Festival, when a King or Queen will be crowned. Students from kindergarten through 12th grade are invited to participate, with each student eligible to serve on the court only once during their school years.

In addition, CLC is introducing a special "Elite Ensemble" Harvest Court for community members aged 65 and older. This intergenerational approach celebrates connection between youth and elders, honoring shared community spirit.

Court members will volunteer at various CLC events and parades throughout the year, helping to promote civic pride and teamwork. While attendance at every event is not required, participation is encouraged.

Each court member will receive a T-shirt and sash to wear at events, though teams may decide on alternate coordinated outfits. Photos will be taken during activities and may appear in local publications; participants may opt out of photo use. Transportation is the responsibility of participants or their parents, though CLC will provide chaperones when necessary.

Applications are open through Oct. 25. Interested participants can apply online at <https://forms.gle/o5fvK1fh6cnoBMr58> or contact Connect Linn County for more information by email: info@connectlinncounty.net or call or text: Karm 541-451-0673, Tika 541-570-3199, Melissa 541-497-4154, or Leise 541-729-3633. ☼

TABLE TALK: DINING IN AND AROUND BROWNSVILLE

The Rusty Bucket Tap House: A Flavorful Stop in Sweet Home

By Jeff Brown, Staff Writer

The Rusty Bucket Tap House has generated positive reviews since its opening, so my wife and I decided to check it out for ourselves.

As we arrived, we noticed two buildings side by side and chose the one with open garage doors, hoping for a cool, airy dining experience. We ended up in the bar area, but it was no issue since food is served wherever you settle. The bar featured several beers on tap, bottles and cans in the cooler, and a full bar for the hard stuff, along with your usual soda pop, water, and the like.

Our server, Selenna (two n’s), was attentive and efficient. The restaurant’s tagline sets the tone: “Welcome to The Rusty Bucket Tap House, where we take you on a culinary journey with our unique blend of traditional and modern cuisine. Our chefs use only the freshest ingredients to create dishes that are bursting with flavor.” With that in mind, my wife ordered a mushroom cheeseburger without the bun and a side of fries, while I opted for the French dip with tater tots.

While waiting for our meals, we entertained ourselves with some card games and other fun little games at the table, which made the wait enjoyable. When our food arrived, my wife enjoyed her burger but noted that the French fries were a bit overcooked. My French dip featured a generous portion of tender beef on a grilled hamburger bun — something I was initially skeptical about, but it turned out to work well. The meat and au jus made for a flavorful combination. The tater tots were crispy and a reliable side; nothing to complain about there.

Chef Kay deserves a mention for the efforts in the kitchen. The menu features a range of savory appetizers and hits on the main course, promising flavors that align with their tagline’s claim.

One highlight of The Rusty Bucket is its extensive selection of beers, available both on tap and in cans or bottles. I plan to return in the evening when the atmosphere is livelier.

Overall, our visit to The Rusty Bucket Tap House was good; the pleasant service and enjoyable food make it a place worth revisiting. If you’re looking for a spot that offers a diverse culinary experience, give The Rusty Bucket at 4102 Main Street in Sweet Home a try. ☼

CRITTER CHRONICLES

Memoir for Ratty

By Sharon Banks, Staff Writer

As told to Sharon Banks by Cheryl Haworth & Don Andrews.

Years ago, Cheryl Haworth worked as a school counselor for the Central Linn School District. As the school year ended, one of the classrooms had a pet rat who had just given birth to a litter of babies. A student asked if Cheryl wanted to take one home.

She hadn't exactly said yes, but on the last day of school, she walked into her office to find a shoe box on her desk. Inside was a tiny white baby rat, barely an inch long, with bright black eyes. When he nibbled on her finger as if to say hello, Cheryl knew he was meant to stay. She called her partner, Don Andrews, and together they set up a small birdcage from Sharing Hands Thrift Store as his first home. They named him Ratty.

Ratty quickly became part of the family. Smart and playful, he loved riding on Don's shoulder while the couple watched TV. He cuddled often and showed surprising affection for such a little creature.

Rats only live about three years, but Ratty filled his short life with love. When his time came, Cheryl and Don say he seemed to know it. He gave Cheryl a gentle nibble-kiss, then climbed onto Don's shoulder — his favorite place — and passed away peacefully.

"Ratty brought us great joy and companionship," Cheryl says. "We cried when he left us, but we still remember him today with smiles and warm hearts."

Their youngest, Hank, 14, plays football and baseball for West Linn High School and has his sights set on a military career.

Throughout his years in law enforcement, Craig has served in multiple specialized units including; the Multi-Agency Traffic Team, Transit Police, Multi-agency Mobile Field Force Riot Team, and the Criminal Apprehension Team (CAT), where he serves high-risk warrants and does sex-offender compliance checks. Currently part of the Traffic Safety Unit, Craig patrols on motorcycles, fitting for a lifelong motorcycle enthusiast with an impressive personal collection.

He also serves on peer support and the Sheriff's Traumatic Response Team (STRT) and plays a critical role on the Incident Management Team, operating heavy armored vehicles for the SWAT team, including the Bear and BearCat, as well as the Mobile Command Center.

After a short stint with the Linn County Sheriff's Office, Jeffrey joined the Lane County Sheriff's Office, where he's proudly served for 27 years. This December, he will hang up his badge and retire — closing a remarkable chapter in law enforcement.

Jeffrey and his wife Krystal have been married for 21 years and are raising two sons, Parks, 15 and Raylan, 13, both students at Central Linn High School. The family lives on Northern Drive in Brownsville — keeping the Wellhouser name

Over the course of his career, Jeffrey has worked in several capacities, including jail operations, court transport, the police academy, and road crew supervision. He currently handles extraditions — traveling across state lines to bring wanted individuals back to Oregon to face justice.

Outside of law enforcement, Jeffrey is an avid farmer, raising and delivering hay to local horse owners. Post-retirement, he plans to focus full-time on this enterprise, continuing his lifelong connection to the land.

Lane County Sheriff's Deputy Jeffrey Wellhouser stands beside the department's armored rescue vehicle.

From the rolling hills of Gap Road to the sheriff's offices of two Oregon counties, the Wellhouser brothers have built lives of service and integrity — much like their parents before them. As both prepare for new chapters, one thing is certain: the spirit of Fred and Jan "Speedy" Wellhouser continues to thrive through their sons, their families, and their deep roots in Brownsville.

KIDS' KORNER

Owls

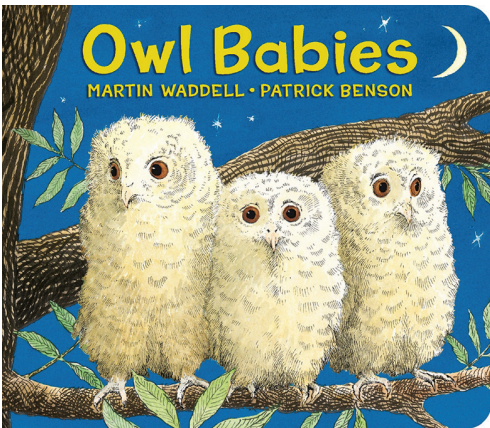

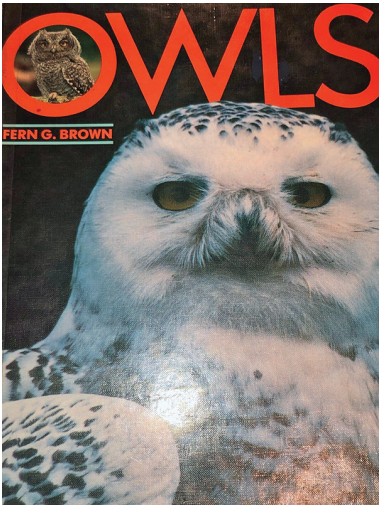

By Nancy Diltz, Staff Writer

Who who whoooo are your favorite birds? The owl is probably at the top of the list of amazing birds, and they may well be your favorite! Adorable and fluffy as babies, fierce and fast as adults, owls are truly fascinating.

Owl feathers are specially adapted for silent flight as they swoop down in the dark to hunt. Owl feathers are not waterproof, so they avoid flying in the rain... We may not have many owls here in the winter in Oregon. Their senses are so keen that some owls can detect prey up to a half mile away!

The smallest owl is the Elf Owl, at only 5 inches tall and weighing just one and a half ounces. The largest owl is the Great Gray Owl at 32 inches tall. A group of owls is called a parliament.

For more amazing owl facts, read "Owls" (1991) by Fern G. Brown, available at the Brownsville Library. Young children may enjoy "Owl Babies" (1992) available on Libby eBooks through the Brownsville Library. I also found a copy at the Brownsville Pharmacy, 411 N. Main St.

ACTIVITY: Make a paper plate owl.

Materials: a white paper plate, construction paper scraps, glue, markers, crayons, or paint.

Step One: Color the inside of the paper plate to look like feathers.

Step Two: Fold both sides of the plate evenly toward the middle, allowing your colored feathers to show. These are the owl's wings.

Step Three: Fold the top of the plate down just a little bit. This will be the owl's forehead.

Step Four: Glue two large construction paper eyes onto the owl's forehead.

Decorate the eyes and wings. Glue on construction paper feet and a beak.

TAKING ROOT

October in the Garden

By Donald Lyon, Staff Writer

Activities in the garden have peaked now as temperatures begin to drop. There is no rest for the weary, though — just a shift of activities. Start preparing your beds for their winter sleep by doing careful weeding and composting disease-free plant material plus kitchen vegetable and fruit scraps. Bindweed and other pernicious plants should go into the gray yard waste bin. Once weeded, if you are not planting a cover crop like clover or fava beans, mulch with straw or leaves. It is also time to drain or blow out your irrigation system.

For me, winter prep for my irrigation system means draining hoses and carefully coiling them so there are no kinks. They are stored out of the weather until next May.

Dig and store potatoes in the dark with some humidity; about 40 degrees is ideal.

Harvest and immediately dry hazelnuts and walnuts at 95 to 100 degrees in the oven on cookie sheets. Shell them first if possible.

More rain can cause tomatoes on the vine to split. Harvest unripe tomatoes and bring them inside to ripen. Store separated by newspapers, inspecting and discarding spoiled ones. Keep apples the same way, separated by newspaper. Mulch around the roots of your roses, azaleas, rhododendrons, and berries.

Clean up flower beds by removing any diseased plant material that overwintering pests may use for shelter. Prune out dead fruiting canes in your raspberries. Dig and divide rhubarb every three to four years. I dig around the plant to expose the roots, then chop it into quarters, leaving some root on each piece. Let them heal for a day, then replant with plenty of compost or manure. If you're not dividing this year, still add compost to rhubarb and asparagus.

It is not too late to plant garlic cloves. Old chive plants will benefit from being dug up and divided, too — no need to be delicate.

Rake up windfall fruits that may be harboring maggot and codling moth larvae. If you have these problems with your fruit trees, rake up and dispose of leaves in the gray bin.

When the leaves finally fall, spray for fungal and bacterial diseases. For more information, search online for "Managing Diseases and Insects in Home Orchards" for an OSU Extension article. Most of the information in this report is from OSU Extension's Growing magazine.

BOOK REVIEW

'Northern Spy' Explores Family, Betrayal, and the Troubles in Ireland

By Nancy Diltz, Staff Writer

"Northern Spy" by Flynn Berry (2021) is a thriller you won't put down. The story captures the tense tightrope walk between the main character's desire to be a good mother to her baby and her longing to make a political difference in her country of war-torn Ireland. The two roles cannot always coexist, as she comes to understand.

After a slow start, the book's momentum accelerates. Berry's prose is spare and precise, and her characters behave matter-of-factly even in times of great duress, creating an overall tone of stoicism. The tension plays out between IRA members and MI5 spies, set in and around Belfast, roughly ten years after the Good Friday Agreement of 1998.

According to Goodreads, "Northern Spy" is "a slow-burn page-turner — a riveting and exquisite novel about family, terror, motherhood, betrayal, and the staggering human costs of an intractable conflict."

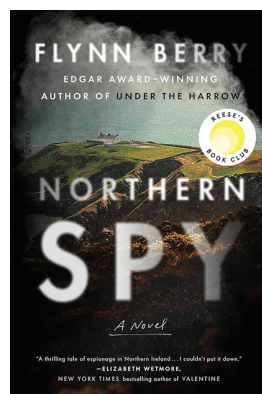

The novel follows two Irish sisters and the political secrets and lies that threaten to tear their family apart. One sister is accused of espionage, and the other must choose between spying on local IRA members in hopes of aiding the establishment of peace in Belfast — or protecting her baby and fleeing the country and the family she loves.

Goodreads also notes that "Northern Spy" "...cements Flynn Berry's status as one of the most sophisticated and accomplished authors of crime and suspense novels working today."

On her website, Berry introduces herself: "Hello! I'm the author of four novels: 'Trust Her,' 'Northern Spy,' 'A Double Life,' and 'Under the Harrow.' My reviews have appeared in The New York Times Book Review, and my writing has appeared in The Sunday Times and New York magazine." Berry won an Edgar Award for Best First Novel for "Under the Harrow."

Both "Northern Spy" and "Under the Harrow" are available through the Brownsville Library's Libby audiobooks collection. ☼

Rural Roads, Rural Choices: Asphalt vs. Chip Seal for Driveways

By Sharon K. Banks, Staff Writer

For rural homeowners the decision of paving a long driveway in the country often comes down to two options: asphalt or chip seal. Both surfaces provide smoother travel and less dust than gravel, but they differ in cost, durability, appearance, and maintenance needs. With budgets tight, choosing the right material is more than cosmetic — it's an investment in long-term value and usability.

Asphalt: Smooth, Long-Term Solution

Asphalt driveways are made by laying a hot mixture of stone aggregate and bitumen onto a compacted base. The surface is rolled to create a durable, uniform finish. With proper care, asphalt can last 15 to 20 years or more. It provides a quiet surface for driving, reduces dust, and is easier to clear during snow season.

The benefits, however, come at a higher cost. Asphalt typically runs between $4 and $7 per square foot and requires sealing every three to five years. Temperature extremes can also cause cracking, particularly in freeze-thaw climates.

Doug Troyer, owner of Blackstone Paving, emphasized asphalt's durability. "We put a minimum of three inches of asphalt over compacted gravel to provide a smooth, long-lasting road," he said. "Asphalt is more expensive, but it lasts longer."

Troyer also cautioned homeowners to watch out for subpar materials. "Some contractors pass off recycled roadbed material as asphalt and charge full price. It won't last."

Tom Melton of Pavco Paving in Corvallis explained that a minor mix of recycled content is standard, but regulated. "Up to 25 percent recycled asphalt is consistent with ODOT regulations," he said. "Recycling is important, but too much weakens the product. And if you've got a clay base, both asphalt and chip seal will struggle unless the roadbed is properly prepared."

Chip Seal: Budget-Friendly Alternative

Chip seal, or "tar and chip," offers a more affordable option. It involves spraying liquid asphalt over a prepared surface, then covering it with crushed stone chips that are rolled into place. The result is a textured, rustic-looking road that blends naturally into rural settings.

"Chip seal offers rustic charm and affordability," said Bennie Acker of Columbia Asphalt Paving. "If you want a perfectly smooth surface, asphalt may be better, but for those prioritizing durability and cost, chip seal is an excellent choice."

Chip seal costs between $1.50 and $3 per square foot — roughly half the price of asphalt. It provides good traction and can be applied over gravel or worn asphalt. Its drawbacks include a shorter lifespan of seven to ten years, a rougher texture, and some loose gravel after installation. It also performs less smoothly when snow is plowed.

Which Option Is Best for You?

For rural homeowners, the choice depends on budget, traffic, and preference. Asphalt is ideal for those who want a long-term, low-maintenance solution and can afford the upfront investment. Chip seal is better suited for longer private roads with low traffic and tighter budgets.

Woody Banks, who maintains a mile-long driveway on Gap Road, explained his split approach. "The first half mile was paved in asphalt because we had four neighbors splitting the cost. The last half was just us, so we chose chip seal. It was about half the cost, and since traffic is light, it was the best solution."

Tips Before You Pave

Before committing to either material, get multiple quotes and ensure the base is prepared correctly. A weak base leads to failure regardless of the paving method. Drainage should also be considered, especially on sloped land, and the local climate is critical in determining longevity.

Whether you choose the sleek durability of asphalt or the cost-effective charm of chip seal, investing in a well-built driveway enhances the beauty, value, and functionality of rural property for years to come. 🚧

Community Mourns Loss of Don Carroll

LEBANON — The family of Don Carroll has confirmed that he was found deceased on Oct. 18 in a remote area east of Sweet Home, bringing a heartbreaking end to the two-week search that united friends, neighbors, and volunteers across Linn County and beyond.

Carroll, 88, was last seen leaving Lebanon on Oct. 4, driving his charcoal gray 2016 Ford Edge with an Oregon "Smokey the Bear" license plate. He was reported missing soon after, prompting an extensive search involving the Lebanon Police Department, Linn County Sheriff's Office, and many community members.

Around 12:30 p.m. on Oct. 18, a mushroom picker near Upper Calapooia Drive and Blue River Reservoir Road, about 30 miles east of Highway 228, discovered an unattended vehicle matching Carroll's. Search and Rescue teams responded, using a drone to locate Carroll about 150 to 200 feet below the road in a steep, wooded canyon. The Linn County Medical Examiner and family members were notified. Authorities said there is no indication of foul play.

In a statement, the family shared, "Our family is deeply saddened by this loss but comforted knowing he has been found and is at peace. We are so grateful for the outpouring of support, prayers, and help from friends, family, and the community during this difficult time."

The Lebanon Police Department also expressed appreciation to everyone who assisted in the search, saying that the compassion shown "demonstrated the strength and unity of our community."

Don Carroll was known as a kind, hardworking man devoted to his family and friends. His loss is felt deeply throughout the community that came together to bring him home.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been announced. The Brownsville Times covered the community's search efforts in last week's issue. 🕯️

TANGENT CITY COUNCIL

Council Member Resigns, Citing Lack of Support

By Mikayle Stole, Editor

TANGENT — Councilor Leslie Harrison has resigned from the Tangent City Council, effective immediately, citing an environment she described as “biased rather than inclusive.”

In a letter submitted to the mayor, council, and city staff on Oct. 15, Harrison wrote that she “accepted the appointment with a deep sense of responsibility and pride,” but found that “from the moment I stepped through the door, it was clear that I was met with bias rather than inclusion.”

Harrison stated that she had “experienced retaliation for speaking up, sharing perspectives, or asking necessary questions,” adding that the “cumulative effect has created an environment that is no longer tenable or healthy to continue serving in.”

Her letter concluded, “It is my sincere hope that the City will reflect on how to foster a more supportive and equitable environment for future council members.”

City Manager Joe Samaniego acknowledged Harrison’s resignation in a written statement, saying, “We have reluctantly accepted your resignation from the Tangent City Council. You will be missed, as we saw you introduce the food pantry idea... and help promote Tangent to a more statewide presence.”

He thanked Harrison for her community work, including launching the Tangent Farmers Market. He added, “We know you’ll continue an active role, and we’ll be in touch as we prepare the annual calendar of events.”

The City will announce the next steps regarding the vacant council seat at a future meeting. ☼

BROWNSVILLE WOMEN’S STUDY CLUB

Gearing Up for Festival of Trees

By Cyndi Anderson, Festival of Trees Coordinator

Too early to be thinking about the holidays? Not if you’re a member of the Brownsville Women’s Study Club’s Festival of Trees committee. Members have been busy for weeks tagging the trees to be used, organizing supplies, developing publicity, and are now securing downtown locations and tree artists for this popular community fundraiser.

This is the tenth year this group has organized the event, having taken it over from the Brownsville Chamber of Commerce in 2015. In those ten years, the club has raised over $30,000 to help support the Brownsville Community Library and many other organizations and causes, including Sharing Hands, Meals on Wheels, Brownsville Fire Department, Brownsville Legion, Central Linn School field trips, and more.

The holiday festivity of festooned trees up for bid through a silent auction process has proven to be a solid fundraiser for the organization and a fun event for the community. At the Brownsville Women’s Study Club’s November meeting, members will discuss and vote on recipients of this year’s funds, in addition to the Brownsville Community Library.

The Festival of Trees will be held on Friday and Saturday, December 5 and 6, as part of Brownsville’s Home for the Holidays event sponsored by the Brownsville Chamber of Commerce. Trees will once again be placed in the Moyer House, Brownsville Art Center, participating businesses throughout the downtown area, and the Brownsville Rec Center, where a craft bazaar will be held. Over the two days, folks bid on their favorite trees, and high bidders can take their fully ornamented tree home, donate it to charity, or, in some cases, leave it in place to continue bringing holiday cheer to its host site. Most host locations and tree artists have been secured, although there are a few trees still available to decorate.

If you’re interested in hosting a tree, raising funds for the library, and other worthy causes, please get in touch with Sherri Lemhouse at bvorwscfot1911@gmail.com. For more information about the event, please get in touch with Festival of Trees coordinator, Cyndi Anderson, at 541-570-1055 or email thebrownsvillehouse@gmail.com. ☼

COFFIN BUTTE LANDFILL

Part One: Landfill Expansion Plan Sparks Debate Across Benton and Linn Counties

By Jeff Brown, Staff Writer

CORVALLIS — A plan to expand the Coffin Butte Landfill north of Corvallis has stirred up strong opinions across Linn and Benton County. Supporters say the project is needed to keep up with growing waste demands, while opponents fear it will worsen long-standing environmental and quality-of-life problems.

Republic Services, which operates the landfill under its Valley Landfills division, applied for a permit to enlarge the disposal area. The company says the expansion would extend the landfill’s life and give local governments more time to plan for future waste management.

According to company materials, the new design would be “50 percent smaller than the 2021 proposal,” and include road upgrades, more landscaping, and less disruption to surrounding areas. View and comment on the expansion here: <https://coffinbuttelandfill.com>.

Republic Services argues that without an expansion, trash from Benton, Linn, and surrounding counties will need to be hauled farther away, driving up costs and vehicle emissions. “This expansion helps ensure affordable, local waste disposal while maintaining modern environmental protections,” a company spokesperson said in a statement.

But not everyone is convinced. In July 2025, after weeks of public hearings, the Benton County Planning Commission unanimously rejected the permit request. The seven-member panel concluded that the project failed to show it wouldn’t harm nearby land uses or place extra burdens on county roads and infrastructure. See updates on the Coffin Butte Landfill here: <https://www.bentoncountyor.gov/lu-24-027-proposed-coffin-butte-landfill-expansion>.

Planning Commissioner Catherine Biscoe said during deliberations that testimony revealed “a continual disregard for proper management of Coffin Butte landfill” and for “the health and safety quality of life” of local residents, July 23, 2025. Listen to the full interview at <https://www.klcc.org/environment/2025-07-23/benton-county-planning-officials-reject-proposed-coffin-butte-landfill-expansion>.

The company has appealed the county’s decision, setting up a new round of hearings this fall. The next public meeting will be held October 22–23 at the Benton County Fairgrounds Auditorium in Corvallis, where residents can again share their views.

The Coffin Butte debate is complicated, involving science, policy, and local concerns that continue to evolve. The statements and opinions quoted here reflect what was shared publicly, but they don’t cover every aspect of the issue. Readers are encouraged to learn more through Benton County’s official website and other reliable sources.

Next week’s part two article will feature local voices and environmental concerns behind the opposition. ☼

AMERICAN LEGION

Veteran’s Day Breakfast for Vets

November 11, 7 to 10:30 a.m. at the Brownsville American Legion Post 184

By an ordinary seaman

There’s a time of year when the air itself seems to be wearing an old tweed coat, crisp, and smelling faintly of damp earth — that’s when we come upon the Eleventh Hour of the Eleventh Day of the Eleventh Month. It’s a fine, rolling set of numbers, and it marks the minute in 1918 when the biggest argument the world had ever seen finally quieted down. We used to call it Armistice Day, a hopeful sort of name, like a promise whispered in the aftermath.

We had more wars, of course, because an old story never really ends; it just waits for the next chapter. So, in ’54, President Dwight Eisenhower changed the name to Veterans Day for all the folks who volunteered to step out of the great, soft lump of us — the uncreated clay, as it were — and get hammered into something useful, something real. They wore the uniform, and that’s the long and short of it.

It’s not a day for tears; that’s Memorial Day’s job in May. This day is about the living. It’s about the person you see buying gas down at Nealon’s, the one with the easy laugh and the steady eyes, who carries a history that’s not written in the local gossip. They’ve been somewhere else, seen the far side of things, and then come back to us.

You can spin all the philosophy you want about why a person stands up in the first place, but the plain fact is, when it’s all done, they deserve a thank you that’s more substantial than a handshake. They deserve a good, honest meal.

The good fellows down at the American Legion, Travis Moothart Post 184, know the truth of this. They understand that all the high-flown talk of patriotism must eventually settle on a warm plate in a welcoming hall.

So, on November 11, the Post is throwing a free breakfast for all veterans. Now, forget those watery excuses for food you had in uniform. This isn’t one of those S.O.S. situations we’re glad to leave to history. This, friends, is a serious endeavor. We’re laying out pancakes as light as a day-dream, eggs so fluffy they practically float, and thick, pan-seared sausage that crackles with the sound of home.

It’s a simple, perfect act. It’s our chance to look those who served right in the eye and say, “We appreciate the person you became.” Come on down, the coffee will be hot, and the gratitude will be thick as molasses.

Disclaimer: All times are Brownsville time, all menu items are “while they last,” and all food descriptions are exaggerated. ☼

MOUNTAINTOP REFLECTIONS

Light in Dark Places

By Jacquie Hoekstra

“You are the light of the world. A city located on a hill can’t be hidden. Neither do you light a lamp, and put it under a measuring basket, but on a stand; and it shines to all who are in the house. Even so, let your light shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven” (Matthew 5:14-16). These words of Jesus are recorded in scripture in the broader work known as The Sermon on the Mount. It is a reminder to Christ-followers to carry his light in every place and in every season.

Scripture does not direct light-bearers to avoid or boycott any area of this world. Instead, it calls us to carry the light of life and truth into every place on earth, in every season. In Romans Chapter Fourteen, Paul encourages the readers of his letter to live in freedom according to their faith. If they have faith to eat meat sacrificed to idols, then do it in faith. If their faith says not to eat meat sacrificed to idols, then they should avoid doing so. He never directs them to boycott the market altogether. He releases each person to follow the conviction of freedom they have found in Christ. Each person’s freedom should not offend another person’s faith or lead them to act beyond their faith, which could cause them to sin.

Scripture is always relevant. This chapter in Romans speaks to each person’s conviction before the Lord. Some who are more mature in their faith might have the freedom to participate in seasonal events, whereas others might have a deep conviction not to join a particular event or celebration. Each one might be equally convicted in a different direction. If it is not a salvation issue, then grace toward one another is the right way forward. Aimee Semple McPherson, founder of the Foursquare movement and denomination, coined this phrase: “In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; and in all things charity.” If it is a salvation issue, hold to it. If it is not a salvation issue, give freedom. Whatever it is, let your love-light shine.

Wherever a Christ-follower shines their light, it must be rooted in love flowing from a deep, abiding relationship with God in his Word and through experiencing him. Whenever you choose to shine your light, do it in faith, knowing God has called you to it, knowing he is the light shining through you. We must understand and give freedom to those who choose to shine a light in dark places differently from us and vice versa, without assuming the other is wrong in their expression of faith.

Verse 16 above includes good works which are visible to others. If we hide behind closed curtains and strong opinions, we only partner with the darkness. Good works are directly related to kind deeds done publicly. What light-bearing deed is God calling you to in this season? ☼

Alma Pearl Winterbotham

Alma Pearl Winterbotham, 92, of Keizer, Oregon, passed away on October 6, 2025.

She was born in Omaha, Nebraska, on June 16, 1933, to Harold and Irene Dunlap, the eldest of three children. After the birth of her youngest brother, the family moved to Newman Grove, Nebraska, where Alma graduated from high school in 1952. Shortly afterward, the family relocated to Cheshire, Oregon. Alma found work as a telephone operator and soon met her future husband, Jerry Winterbotham, while attending a dance in Eugene. They were married on June 20, 1954, and settled on a small ranch outside of Elkton, where they raised three daughters.

After purchasing the Freez-Ett Drive-In, Alma dedicated much of her time to cooking and making donuts for customers.

Following Jerry’s retirement, they lived in Roseburg and Brownsville before moving to Keizer to be near family. Alma was preceded in death by her husband, Jerry, her parents, and both of her brothers, Harold Jr. and Ernie. She is survived by her three daughters, Lori (Greg), Sally, and Cathy (Joe); granddaughter Kate; and numerous nieces and nephews.

Alma enjoyed reading, crocheting, and embroidery. She was an avid Oregon State fan and spent many hours watching the Beavers on TV and rooting for them.

A private family interment will be held at Willamette National Cemetery. Contributions can be made to a local food bank or a charity of your choice, if desired. ☼

BROWNSVILLE LIBRARY

Pumpkins, Story Time, and World Travel at the Brownsville Library

By Sherri Lemhouse, Brownsville Librarian

Halloween is approaching fast. Thanks to volunteer Carol Humphreys, the Library is all decked out at the front entryway! There are bats and crows and leaves and strings. It's all good fun. Come to the Library and duck out of the rain.

Friday, October 31, from 3 to 6 p.m., the Library will be participating in the Brownsville Chamber of Commerce Downtown Trick or Treat. The Farmer — librarian Sherri's husband — grew mini pumpkins to hand out as treats. This is the third year we have handed out these little gems instead of candy. The Friends of the Library purchased some fun eye stickers to encourage children to decorate them. The library will stay open the extra hour to greet these sweet Trick or Treaters! We hope to see you and your children on Halloween at the Library.

In October, we focus on fall activities. Ms. Thea dreams of pumpkins, scarecrows, and leaves falling off trees. Her favorite time is seeing all the smiling faces come in for Story Time (Fridays from 11 a.m. to noon). Check out some of the great books purchased for the library this month! If you want to watch the box opening video, search for @brownsvilibrary9641 on YouTube.

Last Thursday, Oct. 16, former professional photographer and tour guide, Don Lyon, presented India's Fabled Rajasthan. It was a perfect beginning to the delightful and informative World Cultures & Travel series. Our next program will be on Thursday, November 20, at 7 p.m. Don will present France's La Belle Provence in the Kirk Room at your local Library. All programs are free and open to the public.

WHERE TO STAY

CENTRAL LINN GIRLS' SOCCER

Closes Regular Season Strong

By Tony Koontz, Sports Editor

The Central Linn Girls' Soccer team wrapped up the last two weeks of regular-season play with determination and skill, posting a 2-1-1 record and continuing to show why they remain one of the top programs in their league.

The Cobras opened the stretch with a hard-fought 1-0 win at Pleasant Hill on Oct. 7, with senior Jayne Neal netting the decisive goal off an assist from sophomore Maddie Durringer. Sophomore goalkeeper Hazel Huxford recorded the shutout with two saves.

In a rare setback on Oct. 10, Central Linn fell 1-2 to Creswell, ending an impressive 21-game unbeaten league streak. Senior Addie Wolff scored on a penalty kick in the match.

The team rebounded with a 1-1 draw at Sisters on Oct. 14, with Neal again finding the net, assisted by Durringer.

Central Linn capped the week Oct. 16 in style with a dominant 8-0 Senior Night win over La Pine. Senior leadership was on full display as Peyton Gaskey, Jayne Neal, and Addie Wolff each contributed multiple goals, supported by scores from Georgia Wahl and Avery Runyon. The team combined for seven assists, highlighted by three from Gaskey. Sophomore goalkeeper Ali Williams earned the shutout.

Player Spotlight: Senior Peyton Gaskey has been a cornerstone of Central Linn's potent offense. Having already surpassed last year's totals of six goals and five assists, Gaskey now boasts eight goals and eight assists with two regular-season games remaining.

Team Notes: "These last two weeks have been a good testament to the team's mentality and will to keep having a great season and gear toward playoff play," said Head Coach Robert Arteaga. "Even after losing their first league game in two years, they've found another gear to keep imposing their style or adapting as needed to achieve results." The Cobras' resilience and depth position them well for postseason competition.

CENTRAL LINN ELEMENTARY

Little Cobras Run for Classroom Cash

By Eva Wada, Staff Writer

The cold autumn air crackled with excitement as every grade at Central Linn Elementary School (CLES) laced up for a high-energy jog-a-thon on October 9. Cones marked a quarter-mile course across the back fields of CLES in Halsey, but the goal wasn't just miles. PE teacher Dena Weber summed up their endeavors: "The goal was to prove that we can keep moving for 15 minutes. Running wasn't a requirement. Only to enjoy exercising without stopping."

With upbeat music blasting while teachers tallied laps, volunteers encouraged students with cheers specific to each child — a feat only a close-knit community can accomplish. The Parent Teacher Committee members held up handmade signs — an especially motivating one promised, "Keep going! There are snacks after the finish line!"

Camaraderie was everywhere, from students skipping hand-in-hand to older kids giving a boost to tired little legs. As third graders, Bodie Francis and Brielle Holden shared, "We yelled to our classmates, 'keep going, don't give up!'" On average, students completed 1.11 miles within the 15-minute rounds.

The Cobras' perseverance paid off, not just in physical fitness, but in funds raised for classroom activities and future field trips. The whopping grand total raised by students and their supporters was a little over $5.5K. The top fundraisers won prizes, including building blocks and stuffed animals.

What a fantastic day for fitness, fun, and fundraising for the Central Linn community.

CENTRAL LINN BOYS' SOCCER

Cobras Stay Strong in Playoff Push

By Hans Schneider, Boys Soccer Coach

The Central Linn boys soccer team continued to impress through mid-October, showing strong chemistry and grit as they battled for a playoff spot. Over the past two weeks, the Cobras posted a 2-1 record, including two decisive wins and a narrow loss to a top-ranked opponent.

The Cobras opened the stretch on Oct. 6 with a commanding 6-0 victory over Pleasant Hill at home. Wyatt Smith led the attack with two goals, while Konner Gaskey, Don Ware, and Aren Schneider each added one. Jackson Durringer's relentless pressure created another score off a defensive miscue. Senior goalkeeper Leif Erickson and the Cobra defense held the shutout.

Central Linn followed with a critical 1-0 win against Sisters on Oct. 9 in a match that likely determined playoff positioning. Schneider connected with Durringer just before halftime for the game's only goal, and Erickson sealed the win with a last-second point-blank save.

In their final outing of the stretch, the Cobras faced undefeated Creswell on the road Oct. 16. Durringer gave Central Linn an early lead, capitalizing on a rebound, but the Bulldogs fought back to claim a 3-1 win despite the Cobras' strong possession and defensive effort.

Player Spotlight: Senior goalkeeper Leif Erickson has been a steady anchor for the Cobras all season. Known for his calm presence and leadership on the field, Erickson's sharp reflexes and fearless saves have kept Central Linn in close matches. His clutch performance at Sisters, including a last-second save to preserve the shutout, exemplified his reliability and competitive spirit.

ENERGY STORIES OF LINN COUNTY

A Case Study in Solar

By Sharon & Woody Banks, Staff Writers

24919 Gap Road, Brownsville

Last summer, my husband and I decided to install a solar array on the south side of our hill. The site was unusable for anything else — steep, rocky, and covered with heavy clay soil — but it turned out to be perfect for solar. We hired Pure Energy to install a 24-kilowatt system with 68 solar panels, a grid-tied meter, and a battery backup to provide power during outages. We also added a Level 2 car charger for our electric vehicle. The system has now been in operation for over a year, and here are the results:

Cost Breakdown
Total Cost	$59,642.40
Federal Tax Credit	−$17,889.60
Net Cost	$41,752.80

Our solar array provides heating and cooling for our 4,400-square-foot home and an additional 800 square feet of heated space in our barn. It also fully charges our electric car and powers our hot tub. We’ve generated more electricity than we can use and currently have over three megawatt-hours banked with Consumers Power to cover winter consumption. The performance has exceeded expectations.

Annual Energy Costs
Utility	Before Solar	After Solar
Gas	$2,660	$0
Electric	$4,400	$0
Total Annual Savings: $7,060
Simple Payback: 5.87 years
Payback without federal incentive: 8.45 years

In our case, the project would have been a sound investment even without the federal tax credit; however, the 30 percent federal incentive made financing much easier and was a deciding factor in our choice to move forward. Before we made the decision, we were skeptical of the amount of savings we would achieve. With energy costs rising every year, savings continue to grow. Adding solar has also increased the value of our property, making this decision a true “no-brainer” for us. This year, we’re adding a greenhouse, powered entirely by our solar surplus — a satisfying next step in making our property more sustainable and self-reliant.

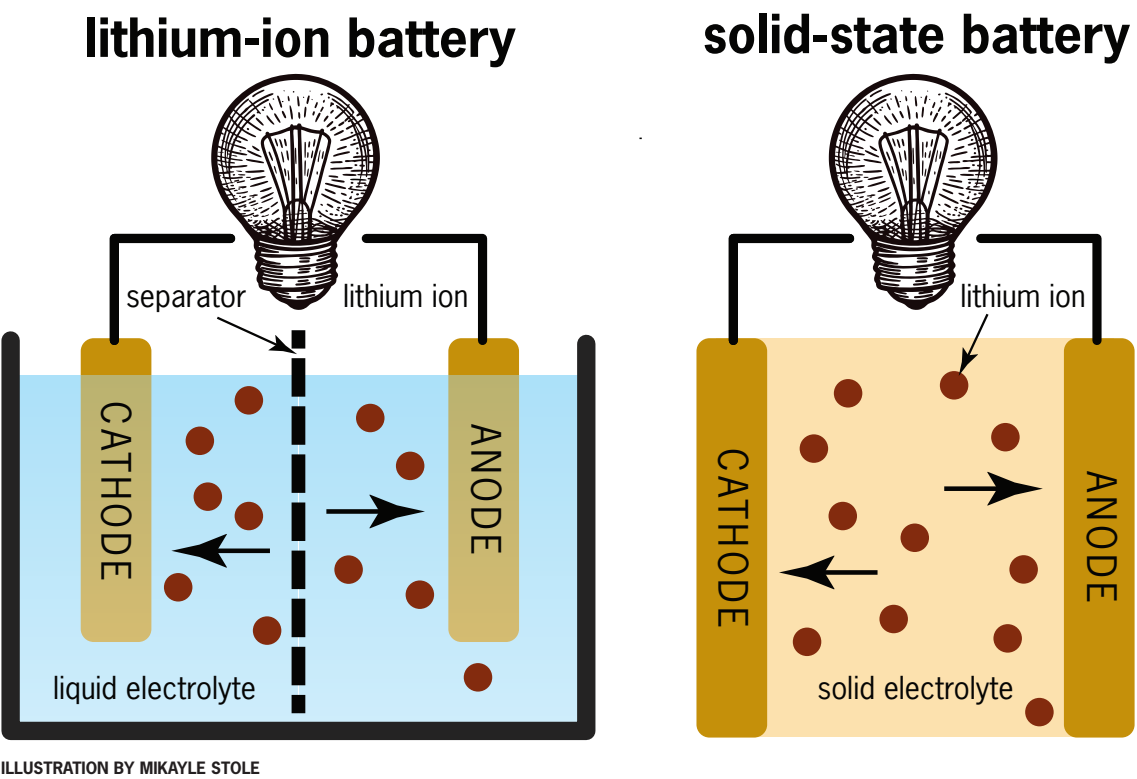

POWERING OREGON

New Solid-State Batteries on the Horizon

By Stephen A. Brenner, Staff Writer

An article in Ars Technica indicates that a new superionic battery technology has been developed as a proof of concept. It promises greater range (600 miles), faster charges (10 minutes), and more safety (nonflammable). Two challenges are holding it back. Getting the production cost down is the first problem. They are extremely sensitive to humidity. If you expose the sulfides to humidity in the air you will generate an extremely toxic gas, hydrogen sulfide. So, the manufacturing space has to be drier than what is conventionally used. And of course, the battery cells have to be protected from rupturing in an accident to avoid that danger. Once the technical difficulties are worked out, getting high-volume factories built is what will bring the cost down to make it doable. Currently, China has a monopoly on its lithium-ion battery technology and manufacturing. In fact, some of their EV cars are already able to charge up in only minutes. The new superionic technology would help level the playing field. While some minerals in the new technology may reduce the need for rare earth sources, it is the magnets in electric motors where rare earth minerals are mostly used. China produces 70 percent of the rare earth minerals and refines 90 percent. By the time this new technology is mature and ready for implementation (2030?), we would hope that the U.S. will have built its own rare earth production and refinement capabilities. Right now, China is threatening to cut off these minerals to pressure the U.S. into opening up the market to U.S. high-performance

AI chips (and chip production technology). If this is still an issue by the time this article publishes, the global tariff problem could be quite extreme since the Feds are threatening 100 percent tariffs on top of the existing 30 percent. What are the ramifications of this technology? A large portion of the cost of an EV vehicle is in the batteries, so having control over the process makes U.S. car manufacturers less dependent on China. With longer range and quicker charging, the primary reluctance to purchase an electric vehicle is eliminated. Full adoption of EV vehicles (including ships and airplanes) will not only reduce the roughly 28 percent of U.S. CO2 emissions that contribute to climate change, but the cost of fuel will be reduced by half, thus stimulating the economy. The move to EV vehicles is inevitable and is happening without government incentives because it is a superior technology and an environmental necessity. In my last article, I talked about Oregon’s deficient electrical grid. If superionic batteries deliver on their promise, the grid could evolve from a centralized, fossil-fuel-driven network to a dynamic, distributed solar and wind energy system. In addition to residences producing and storing their own energy, localized solar and wind farms could serve their communities by tapping into the local distribution substation. And I think that is where Brownsville, as a rural community, may have an advantage over big cities. Our farmers (on a portion of their land) will become our energy producers.

It's Wirth Doing It Right with Ash

By Clive Clarke, Staff Writer

Telly Wirth was busy, as most farmers in the Willamette Valley are in September, and I should have known better. He was kind, though — communicating with me and eventually sitting down for a chat. In his office, the fax machine was working overtime, and calls to his cell phone kept coming in. Don't tell me, men cannot multitask. I saw it with my own eyes — this man was doing just that.

Flu ash was the spelling I was given — from a cogen plant. Huh, what's a cogen plant?

Flu ash didn't work out when googled — typo, I thought. Fly ash, perhaps. No, fly ash is a fine powder and a byproduct of coal combustion. This type of ash is discouraged because of toxicity concerns. With some words of wisdom from Telly and help from Google University, I became more enlightened and realized that it was flue ash. Flue ash and fly ash are vastly different, and it's flue ash we're talking about here. The word "cogen" is short for cogeneration and is a plant that produces both electricity and useful heat from a single fuel source.

Stay away from fly ash — it isn't good for your respiratory system, mainly, and can cause silicosis. It has heavy metal content, like arsenic, cadmium, and lead, with silica particles.

The good stuff — flue ash is a wood ash from biomass combustion and is used as a soil amendment in farm fields. Its nutrient source provides essential nutrients, such as potassium, phosphorus, and magnesium, for a better crop and good yields. It contains high levels of calcium and is a liming agent that helps to raise the soil's pH factor (soil acidity or alkalinity). I didn't know this, but apparently the soil in the valley is very acidic, and so lime is needed, and by using Flue ash, he's utilizing a byproduct that's rich in lime, good for the environment, and is cost-effective. Wirth Farms and other farms in the valley will use several thousand tons of flue ash every year, and the cogeneration plants are happy to get rid of it to responsible farmers. It's environmentally friendly, reduces the amount of agricultural lime needed, and is approved by Oregon's Department of Environmental Quality.

To figure out which fields will need the ash, a soil sample is taken for analysis and to give a baseline. Telly then decides, based on ash availability and the results of soil samples, which fields indicate the greatest need. He contacts Jay with Horner Enterprises with location pins for where he wants the ash dropped.

Horner Enterprises, a local company started by Jay and his father, David, in 1994, transports the ash, dumps it in the desired field, and later spreads it. It's a partnership with the farmers, and they, too, believe in using industrial byproducts in an environmentally-friendly way.

When the time and the weather are right, the same outfit shows up with their loaders, tractors, and New Leader (manufacturer) Floor spreaders. Out it goes — spread evenly across the fields and then disced in by the farm's crew. After a while, another soil sample will be taken, and with some help from an OSU website, a determination will be made for how much more lime will be needed. Flue ash is activated carbon and sheds water better, and so with the ground being wet, the moisture below is retained.

In the fall, grass is planted and top-dressed with fertilizer. They grow other crops too, such as corn, wheat, clover, peppermint, and meadowfoam.

I didn't get to meet Amorita. She's Telly's wife, and I suspect she plays a major role on the farm. Their oldest son is, for now anyway, not involved on the farm — he's off training for something worthwhile. Then there's Jaxon, the youngest, who is enrolled at LBCC and impressed me because he'd just overhauled a Perkins engine in an old Massey. That's a rare thing these days, especially for someone so young — overhauling an engine. Engine overhauls are almost a thing of the past anymore. Instead, when an engine fails, and because of costly downtime at a critical time, the best option quite often is to swap the failed engine with a remanufactured one.

Old red tractors are my favorite, and anyone who keeps them rolling — well, they must be okay. ☺

Linn County Sheriff's Office Issues Warning About Bitcoin Phone Scam

The Linn County Sheriff's Office is alerting residents about a phone scam where callers falsely claim to be from the department and ask for payments through Bitcoin ATMs.

According to the Sheriff's Office, scammers have been calling local residents randomly, pretending to be department employees and telling them they owe an immediate fine. They direct victims to use a Bitcoin ATM for payment and often seek personal details.

"These are all major red flags," the Sheriff's Office stated. "No law enforcement agency will ever call and demand any form of payment, and we do not handle Bitcoin."

At least one Linn County resident has reportedly lost $25,000 to this scam.

Officials recommend that anyone receiving such a call should hang up right away and contact the Sheriff's Office directly at 541-967-3950 to verify if the department is trying to reach them.

"Stay vigilant, Linn County," the department urged. "We hate to see our community members scammed out of their hard-earned money." ☺
