

Kim's Kafé Brings the Historic Tangent Store Back to Life

By Marcy Hermens, Staff Writer and Tangent Correspondent

Kim Ellington stands ready to welcome the community into Kim's Kafé when it opens on Dec. 2.

A familiar spark of life is returning to Tangent as the historic Tangent Store, built in the 1890s, is beginning a new chapter as Kim's Kafé on Tuesday, Dec. 2.

Originally operated by A.B. Conrad, then by Charles and Hattie Jenks well over a century ago, the store was once the beating heart of a growing railroad town. The store stood on one side of the tracks, the train depot on the other — intentionally placed to serve locals and travelers alike. Through the decades, the building changed hands and purposes many times. Today, the building is still owned by Delores Moseley who ran the Tangent Market from 1977–1986.

Pieces of the building's history remain in the original wooden boardwalk, the original ceiling above the kitchen, and the walk-in freezer's thick wooden door.

A lifelong Oregonian, Kim Ellington grew up between the coast and the valley, discovering her love of the service industry early. She began working at Applebee's at just 14 and, over the next decade, worked her way up to manager, gaining experience and a deep appreciation for connecting with people.

Kim's journey took her across the country during her husband Dennis' time in the Navy, but they eventually returned to his hometown of Tangent to raise their family surrounded by the small-town values that shaped him.

Kim's dream of opening her own restaurant began taking shape in 2023. Rather than buy an existing cafe, she wanted to create something uniquely hers — something that felt like home.

BROWNSVILLE WOMEN'S STUDY CLUB

Victorian Punk Tree Blends Brownsville History With Holiday Spirit

By Mandy Cole, Staff Writer

Don't miss The Brownsville Times' "Victorian Punk" tree decorated by Anne Clarke.

The Brownsville Times office is the best spot for a spectacular Christmas tree. "With big windows facing the intersection of Main Street and Spaulding, our Victorian Punk tree will be seen by everyone," says Anne. What is Victorian Punk? Anne explains that the Victorian Age was coming to an end just as the Brownsville Times was first published in 1889, so anything Victorian is the perfect theme. She will decorate the Times' tree with historical elements such as sepia-tinted photos of Brownsvillians of the past, Victorian elements of natural materials — copper, leather, or wood — and mechanical elements of clockworks and gears. "The decorations will range from elegant to rugged. And, of course, all the garlands will be created from past issues of the Times," says Anne.

ANNE CLARKE
Elements of history and craft — sepia portraits, copper, leather, and gears — will adorn the Victorian Punk tree.

The Festival of Trees, Dec 5–6, is the perfect event for The Brownsville Times to participate in. Anne says, "Festival of Trees is dedicated to and benefits the community. The Brownsville Times is dedicated to building our community and is an essential partner in connecting all of Brownsville. Did you know that the Times office is open Monday-Friday, 9 a.m.–noon? The welcome mat is out, and a volunteer is available to hand a visitor a cup of coffee, hear stories, get your news, and take your tips."

The Times has been at the heart of this community for 136 years. "On the days I volunteer," says Anne, "I love to sit in that big front window and watch Brownsville go by. There's so much history, so much community spirit. We want to keep this area thriving for another century."

You can bid on the Brownsville Times' Victorian Punk tree on Dec. 5 and 6 at 343 N Main Street. ☼

Christmas in the Shed Returns to Bryan's Woodshed

BROWNSVILLE — Holiday cheer returns to Bryan's Woodshed with the annual "Christmas in the Shed" event, taking place Thursday through Saturday, Dec. 4 to 6, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

It's an easy way to check off your list while supporting the creators who keep Brownsville's arts community thriving.

The Holiday Art Market is a standalone event, but it shares the weekend with the Festival of Trees, a separate fundraiser hosted by the Brownsville Women's Study Club on Dec. 5–6. SEASONS EATINGS

Cranberries, Coconut, and Shortbread Squares for the Season

By Lisa Keith, Staff Writer

Here are a couple of absolutely fantastic treats to add to your holiday baking list. We'll start with a lovely cranberry cookie. These get "gobbled" up every single time I share. They are soft, with a delicate flavor and texture. A refreshing change from your standard holiday fare.

Cranberry-Coconut Chewies

Yields about six dozen cookies

- 1 ½ cups room temperature butter

2 cups sugar

1 Tbsp orange zest

2 tsp vanilla extract

1 egg

3 ¼ cups flour

1 tsp baking powder

¼ tsp salt

1 ½ cups dried or fresh cranberries

1 ½ cups flaked coconut
- 1) Mix butter, sugar, orange peel, and vanilla on medium until smooth. Add egg and beat until incorporated.

2) In a medium bowl, mix flour, baking powder, and salt. Add to the butter mixture. Mix on low speed until the dough comes together. This can take about 5 minutes. Please don't stop until it comes together in a soft, homogeneous mass. Incorporate coconut and cranberries.

3) Shape dough into 1-inch balls and place about 2 inches apart on a well-greased or parchment-lined baking sheet.

4) Bake at 350°F until edges begin to tan. 11–15 min. Transfer to wire racks to cool.
- The following recipe is for a wonderful favorite. We frequently dip the finished square in chocolate or sandwich it with raspberry jam or lemon curd. The silky texture and not-too-sweet flavor make these hard to resist.

Classic Shortbread

- 1 ½ cups softened butter

1 cup granulated white sugar

4 cups flour

2 tsp cornstarch
- Cream butter. Add sugar and cream again. Add flour and cornstarch and mix thoroughly. Press into an 11 x 15 jelly roll sheet. Bake at 325°F for 30 minutes until barely golden. Cut into squares or diamonds while warm. Let cool in the pan.
- As always, please feel free to email me with ideas, questions or suggestions anytime.
- Thank you for your continued support.
iamcheflisa@gmail.com. ☺

Long before she wrote Seasons Eatings, Lisa Keith was already at work in the kitchen. She is shown here baking as a child, circa 1975.

Just around the Corner

EVEN big-city folks must have their "neighborhood stores"! Most of them would no more think of going down town to fight their way through the crowds in search of a roast for dinner than they would of walking to the factory to get a pair of shoes.

City women know that their neighborhood stores can supply them just what they want — and that, in most cases, the service is more alert and friendly.

The same thing is true of this "neighborhood". Our merchants—the men whose ads you read in this paper — are in position to furnish your home with the best and most popular brands of goods. Not only can they save you money, but they gladly relieve you of a lot of worry and loss of time.

Kim and Dennis began conversations with the Moseley family and soon an agreement was reached: the Ellingtons would bring the building back to life as a cafe. Work actively began in 2024 with Kim balancing family, work, and long nights of renovation but “every step was worth it.”

The cafe will offer wraps, sandwiches, salads, soups, a self-serve coffee bar, hand-scooped BJ's Ice Cream, local Blue Silo milk, and meats from Johnson Family Farms. The new cafe will also offer many of the same kitchen staples they use themselves, giving neighbors a convenient, small-town way to pick up everyday essentials.

Kim's vision is simple: a place that feels like walking into her kitchen for a home-cooked meal. “I want to see kids stop in after school for ice cream, families having lunch, neighbors catching up. That's what this is all about.”

Kim's passion for her community shines through as an active member of Tangent Together, a nonprofit dedicated to connection and civic pride. Her cafe will also carry that dedication to connection: “It's more than food — it's community,” she says. After more than a century as a gathering place, the historic grocery store is nearly ready to welcome friends and neighbors again — with coffee, good food, and Kim's signature smile.

Kim's Kafé plans to open officially on Tuesday, December 2. Follow Kim's Kafé at <https://www.facebook.com/KimsKafe.Tangent>.

A relic from Harris Ice Machine Works, an early Oregon refrigeration manufacturer, is still part of the historic building's interior.

A wall of black-and-white photographs celebrating rural life and local history decorates the interior of Kim's Kafé.

TABLE TALK, DINING IN AND AROUND BROWNSVILLE

A Classic Diner Experience at 99 Grill in Harrisburg

By Jeff Brown, Staff Writer

If you enjoy a touch of nostalgia with your morning coffee, 99 Grill in Harrisburg offers just that. Located at 290 North 3rd Street, this 50s- and 60s-style diner serves breakfast, lunch, and dinner all day, staying true to its motto: “We have so many choices, let us do the cooking.”

When my wife and I stopped in, we were greeted right away by Kari, who told us to sit anywhere and insisted we try one of their donuts. It was a friendly, spontaneous gesture that set an easy tone for the meal. Our waitress, Selina, provided efficient service and kept things moving even though the restaurant was busy.

I ordered the Skinny Minnie — link sausage, eggs, hash browns, and toast — while my wife chose the guacamole toast. Both dishes came out quickly and were well prepared. My breakfast was hearty and cooked just as ordered, and the guacamole toast offered a lighter option without sacrificing flavor. I noticed on the menu that almost every entree was well under $20.

The diner itself feels like stepping into another era. The walls are filled with vintage memorabilia, and the mix of locals and travelers gives it a welcoming, lived-in atmosphere. It's the kind of place where people seem to know each other, and newcomers don't stay strangers for long.

In addition to the standard diner fare, the menu includes a few surprises, such as a featured salad of the month and several rotating meal specials. The portions are reasonable, and there's enough variety to satisfy most tastes.

Overall, the 99 Grill delivers on what a small-town diner should be: good food, friendly service, and a comfortable setting. It's not fancy or fussy, but it doesn't need to be.

‘Dear America’ Brings the Great Depression to Life in a Holiday Tale

By Nancy Diltz, Staff Writer

The “Dear America” book series is not to be missed. In this series of 44 books, fictionalized diaries from the perspectives of young women, children, and teens are each set during important historical times. Recommended reading for 4th grade and above, most of the stories are also enjoyable when read aloud to younger children, and even adults can appreciate learning from these books.

“Christmas After All” by Kathryn Laskey (2001) is a perfect selection for the holiday season. According to ThriftBooks.com, “History comes alive through the eyes of a young American girl. To twelve-year-old Minnie Swift, Christmas is not going to be the bounty she is used to. It is 1932, the middle of the Great Depression, and jobs are scarce. Papa seems more worried each day... Minnie's orphaned cousin comes to live with them, and Minnie is resolved to make Christmas memorable despite the hard times. Through her diary, she captures the optimism of a small Midwestern family, the fortitude of the American spirit, and the magic of Christmas.”

The similar series, “Dear America: My Name is America,” has an additional 20 books from the perspective of young men and boys throughout history. There are many stories from fascinating time periods, sure to please and enlighten young readers with a wide variety of interesting topics. Some of the “Dear America” and “Dear America: My Name is America” books include stories about traveling the Oregon Trail, living during the Civil War, and the adventures of a pilgrim boy.

What period in American history do you like? Perhaps there is a “Dear America” or “Dear America: My Name is America” book about your favorite events. You will feel as though you know the writers and their experiences as you enjoy these personal tales. “Christmas After All” is available at the Brownsville Library along with several others in the series.

City Administrator Briana Parra reported progress on several ongoing projects, including:

- Wetlands and Housing: A wetlands inventory draft has been completed. The city is applying for grants and preparing necessary code updates and educational materials for landowners affected.
- Economic Development: An intern, working with REAL, is helping with business outreach, mapping commercial and industrial districts, and updating business resources on the city website.
- Well Project: Data for the city’s well rights application has been submitted, and the well house design has been updated to a more cost-effective above-ground structure.
- I & I Project: Branch Engineering offered design options for wastewater system repairs. Since both options stayed within budget, the more thorough approach was chosen.
- Code Enforcement: A court case involving abandoned vehicles resulted in a guilty verdict; the property owner has 30 days to clean up before abatement is initiated.
- Governor’s Office Resolution Team: City staff will meet on Dec. 2 for assistance with Main Street revitalization and water treatment control projects.

Street Vacations and Utility Easement

The council unanimously approved moving forward with a request to vacate a 170-foot section of West A Street and West B Street adjacent to tax lots 101 and 201. They also approved a utility easement for stormwater drainage infrastructure on tax lot 200, near West 1st Avenue and Crowell Street.

Adoption of Planning Documents

Two key resolutions passed without opposition:

- Resolution 2025-752: Adoption of the Linn County Multi-Jurisdictional Natural Hazard Mitigation Plan.
- Resolution 2025-753: Adoption of the City of Halsey Wastewater Facilities Master Plan.

The meeting adjourned at 8:02 p.m. 🌞

BROWNSVILLE CITY COUNCIL

Brownsville Council Finalizes Policy for Main Street Revitalization

By Sravya Tadepalli, Staff Writer

Before the November meeting of the Brownsville City Council began, Councilor Winklepleck said a prayer and read a verse from the Bible, asking for God to help the Council make wise decisions.

Public Works Superintendent Karl Frink gave a presentation about the 811 line, a nationwide telephone number that individuals must call before any digging project to have underground facilities such as sewer and water lines marked. Frink said that the East Linn Utilities Coordinating Council promotes 811 by going to community events to spread awareness and education.

“We’re noticing a substantial increase in 811 use, so hopefully our efforts are effective,” said Frink.

Frink emphasized that the 811 services provided by the city will only mark the location of public utility lines, and it is the responsibility of the person digging to hire a private utility locator to mark any private lines. According to Frink, going onto private property creates liability issues for the city.

“I’m not indicating that [the lines are] going any direction on their property,” said Frink. “I’m only marking from the meter box back out to our main line.”

City Manager Scott MacDowell gave a presentation on state and federal Total Maximum Daily Load requirements, which require counties and municipalities to develop strategies to reduce pollutants in local waterways. MacDowell particularly discussed the difficulty of pushing back against increased regulations from the state and federal level that impose significant local costs.

MacDowell said that the city had reached out to Buell Recreation about installing new equipment at the Pioneer Park Playground. After considering different options for when and how to finance installation of new playground equipment, the Park Board recommended to replace a damaged slide on the existing small unit (which would cost about $8,000) and delay installation of new playground equipment (which would cost several hundred thousand dollars) until 2027. This recommendation was approved by the City Council for implementation.

The Council adopted an ordinance creating an application process for installing a public streetlight and another ordinance creating an application process for closing a street. The Council also adopted a resolution modifying the land use fee schedule, creating a $100 fee for a permit to install a public streetlight and a $200 fee for a permit to close a public street. Permit holders installing streetlights will be charged for the cost of installation at rates set by Pacific Power plus 10 percent and be responsible for the first year of service for the light. Individuals closing a street may have to pay an additional $200 deposit for use of city signage.

The Council appointed former Linn County Circuit Court judge Daniel Murphy to the Brownsville Planning Commission [disclosure: Daniel Murphy is a board member of The Brownsville Times.] MacDowell said his legal background would be an added strength to the Commission’s work.

At the end of the meeting, the Council discussed the new banners honoring veterans around the city and how to improve their presentation. Council representatives will be meeting with the American Legion soon to plan the next iteration of banners.

“I love them being double-sided, and they’re just awesome,” said Council President Lynda Chambers. 🌞

CRITTER CHRONICLES

Mandy Goat

By Sharon K. Banks, Staff Writer

One summer, my Uncle Rudy’s goat had triplets. I was up at his place “helping” (which mostly meant getting in the way) when we found them — healthy kids and one poor little runt who couldn’t stand and was getting shoved aside. Uncle Rudy sighed and said she probably wouldn’t make it, but I begged him to let me try.

He handed her over, and I marched home like a nurse on a mission. I found a bottle, filled it with calf formula, and started feeding her around the clock. That first night I slept on the floor beside her, and every time she or I moved, I stuck that bottle right back in her mouth. By morning, she was wobbling around. By afternoon, she was following me through the house, bleating happily and decorating the floor with tiny goat pellets.

From then on, she was my shadow. I named her Mandy, and she decided she wasn’t a goat at all — she was a dog. She followed me everywhere, rode in the back of the pickup, and came along to the swimming hole. You should’ve seen people’s faces when our group showed up and the first one down the trail was a white goat.

When I left for college, Mandy stayed home. She slept on top of her doghouse like Snoopy, and if it rained, she’d try to sneak into the house when no one was looking. My folks once tried to breed her with a borrowed Billy, but Mandy beat him up so badly they sent him home early. She never did have babies — she didn’t think she was that kind of goat.

Mandy lived ten years, queen of the yard and boss of the dogs. I still smile every time I think about that stubborn little runt who refused to be a goat. 🐐

ONE HUNDRED YEARS AGO

Red Raspberry Christmas

By Patricia Hainline, revised and edited by Daniel R. Murphy, Staff Writer

Can this be December? The sun shines brightly in a deep blue sky. Here and there is a white cloud. The grass on the flatlands is green and growing. Red raspberry bushes are heavy with the second crop of ripe berries. Animals stay in the fields with no reason for shelter.

It is Christmastime, 1912.

Everyone is coming for a big dinner at noon, so there will be time later for the football game. For generations, Oregonians have been taught to expect and even look forward to the annual fall and winter rains. So, when a winter such as 1912 comes along, it is something to talk about.

During the weeks before Christmas in 1912, Brownsville was busy with parties and socials. The churches were presenting their annual Christmas programs, and The Brownsville Times was filled with ads and Christmas greetings from the merchants.

However, on another page of The Brownsville Times, a writer lamented the increasing trend of commercialism at Christmastime, urging, "This year let us have a real old-fashioned Christmas".

The weather was beautiful, chortled The Times. "What more can we say for the climate of this section than that ripe raspberries are being picked from bushes growing in our gardens at Christmastime.

Holiday activities were similar to those today, with some exceptions. Instead of watching a musical program on TV, people in 1912 attended a street concert on the afternoon of Christmas Day. The band was to appear in full uniform. After the concert, the Brownsville Athletic Club football team met the Independence Athletic Club. A lively contest ensued, witnessed by a good-sized crowd. Brownsville won 18-0.

The week after Christmas was the quietest on record. Earlier Christmas celebrations sometimes had mild weather, such as in 1912. But the pioneers had to make their own Christmas literally.

Pioneer Christmastime

At first, the nearest store was in Oregon City, when even staples were a luxury. The commercialism of later days did not intrude upon the frontier.

The winter of 1845-46, when settlers first started to scatter across the valley, was a mild winter too. After a hard six-month journey across the plains, followed by the trip down the Columbia River or around Mt. Hood on the Barlow Road, weary pioneers could be glad they did not have to face one of Oregon's "regular" winters as did most of those who would come in later years.

One early settler was Richard C. Finley, who built the first grist mill south of Oregon City, where McKercher Park is now located. They arrived in 1846. With his wife, Polly Kirk-Finley, and two small daughters, Finley had been in the wagon train of Jonathan Keeney. Other members of that train included Hugh L. Brown, James Blakely, Alexander Kirk, William Kirk, and Elias Keeney, some of Brownsville's founders.

Finley's daughter, Eliza Finley Brandon, recalled an early Christmas with her family: "The very first feast day which I remember was when Mother made the apple cobbler for Christmas. That was the first Christmas holiday after they had cultivated fruit of their own. It was very wonderful. We children all stood about and ate the apple peelings."

But more important to the pioneers than elaborate gifts and celebrations was the Christmas spirit, which was often demonstrated year-round.

When William Templeton came to Oregon in 1847, it was late in the fall, and the rains were starting. Instead of coming down the Columbia, they took the Barlow Road route. By the time they had come as far as Molalla, their half-starved oxen were too weak to go further, and they were short of supplies.

Jonathan Keeney heard of their troubles. He traveled from his place near Brownsville with two yokes of strong, fat oxen to bring the Templetons to the Brownsville area.

Keeney also helped the McHargue family. They had no flour left and no money to buy any. When McHargue asked to borrow wheat flour, Keeney obliged, and other pioneer families gave potatoes and other foodstuffs.

It may be hard for us to relate to the meager Christmases of the early pioneers or the more sociable and TV-less world of 1912, but we can well understand their enthusiasm for a mild, rainless autumn. ☼

This picturesque gristmill was built by Richard Finley on the falls below present-day McKercher Park on the Calapooya River, east of Brownsville, in Linn County. Finley eventually sold the mill to John McKercher, whose faded name and the date 1848 are still visible on the side of the building in this photo taken by Ralph Eddy in 1934. While it still looks pretty sturdy, it collapsed in 1948.

Thompson's Christmas Trees: A Family Tradition Built on Hard Work and Sustainability

By Jeff Brown, Staff Writer

For more than 42 years, Thompson's Christmas Trees has been part of local holiday traditions. Lucy Thompson and her late husband Claude, known to many as Junior, began planting trees in the late seventies after trying cattle. As Lucy recalls, cows tended to get out. Trees, she said, do not need to be chased. What started as a new direction on the farm soon became a lifelong passion. Their son Chris grew up in the business, learning every step of the work that goes into raising a healthy Christmas tree.

The farm sits at 37320 Mountain Home Drive outside Brownsville, where the Thompsons grow several varieties, including Nordmann, Noble, Turkish Fir, and Blue Spruce. The Nordmann is their most popular tree, known for its strong branches. Blue Spruce also has loyal fans since deer tend to leave it alone.

According to Lucy, there is always something to do on the farm. Each tree requires years of weeding, irrigating, fertilizing, and careful shaping. She and Claude handled much of the work themselves for decades. Today, Chris, a Marine veteran, is preparing to take over the operation as Lucy moves into retirement.

Sustainability has always been part of their approach. Lucy describes real Christmas trees as a crop, simply one that takes a long time to grow. Each acre of trees provides enough daily oxygen for eighteen people. A single tree can absorb more than one ton of carbon dioxide in its lifetime. For every tree harvested, a new one is planted. After the holidays, most real trees are recycled into mulch, playground material, trail covering, or used for shoreline and habitat restoration. Artificial trees, by contrast, are made from PVC and are neither biodegradable nor recyclable.

Families often visit the farm year after year, and Lucy has seen as many as five generations return to choose a tree. Some customers even come early to tag a tree and return later to harvest it. What Lucy enjoys most is meeting the people who come through the farm. As she says, it is a special thing to share the joy.

Thompson's Christmas Trees will be open daily from daylight to dark beginning Thanksgiving weekend. Trees are priced at $16 per foot. 🌲

More Native Plants For Your Garden

By Donald Lyon, Staff Writer

Last week, we talked about the benefits of planting Willamette Valley natives. This week, we'll look at some inexpensive ways to obtain native plants. My favorite is the Annual Winter Native Plant Sale organized by the Benton Soil and Water Conservation District. Search for their website, and you'll see we just missed their Fall Bulb and Seed sale, but the Winter Plant Sale is going on now. You place your order online, prepay, then pick up your plants at the Benton County Fairgrounds on February 28. Even if you don't plan to buy anything, the Online Shop at <https://bswcd.square.site> is worth a look for the beautiful images of perennials, trees, shrubs, evergreen plants, ground covers, and bare root items. Besides the illustration and price, you can check the plant's mature size, preferred habitat, soil type, and a great deal more.

A few of the perennials that caught my eye are Shooting Stars ($4.50) and Showy Milkweed ($4.50) — the host plant for Monarch butterflies. I bought a Douglas Aster ($4.50) many years ago, and it continues to thrive and spread, as do most of these perennials. In the Ground Covers section, I was drawn to the green leaves and red berries of Kinnickinnick ($4). I bought several of their Oregon Grapes more than ten years ago, not realizing they were the tall variety that grows to 10 feet with sharp, holly-like leaves — great for a security hedge under the windows, as long as you keep it pruned. It is Oregon's state flower and is only $1.75. They also have Dwarf Oregon Grapes in one-gallon containers for $11. These spread out to 3-4 feet in diameter and don't grow more than two feet tall. Some of the other large shrubs that will endear you to our feathered friends are the Red Elderberry, Ninebark, Red Flowering Currant, Snowberry, and Western Serviceberry — all priced at $3-4. The Linn County Small Woodlands Association's Annual Seedling Sale is February 14, 2026. Preorder online beginning December 1 at <https://linncountyswa.com/shop>.

MOUNTAINTOP REFLECTIONS

Giving Thanks in Every Circumstance

By Jacquie Hoekstra, Staff Writer

Happy Thanksgiving to you and yours. May your heart, home, and table be filled with the goodness of God, the joy of family and friends, and a bounty of harvest. As we pause to give thanks, I pray our eyes will fall only on all the benefits we enjoy.

I cannot write about the joys without acknowledging the sorrows made more intense during the Holiday Season. Some will spend their first Thanksgiving without a loved one, and some have struggled to put a meal on the table. Others will have an empty seat at their table due to a myriad of unfortunate realities. Yet, we gather with those who are able and celebrate a day of giving thanks.

We give thanks to God. We pause and pay attention. We set aside our frustration and sorrow, and we discern the goodness of God in our lives. Some days, I thank God that I was born at this time in history as I press a button to warm my home, or turn on a tap and enjoy hot water. There have been times when I thanked him for all of the bills being paid and food on the table, though it was not much. Other times, I have thanked him for extravagant and unexpected blessings.

I have considered the Apostle Paul in my reflections on gratitude. He wrote to Timothy, whom he called a spiritual son, “Godliness with contentment is great gain” (1 Timothy 1:2; 6:6 WEB). In his letter to the Philippian church, he said, “I have learned in whatever state I am, to be content in it. I know how to be humbled, and I also know how to abound. In everything and in all things I have learned the secret both to be filled and to be hungry, both to abound and to be in need. I can do all things through Christ, who strengthens me” (Philippians 4:11-13 WEB).

Paul becomes abundantly more impressive when we learn about the trials he experienced while choosing contentment. “Five times from the Jews I received forty stripes minus one. Three times I was beaten with rods. Once I was stoned. Three times I suffered shipwreck. I have been a night and a day in the deep. I have been in travels often, perils of rivers, perils of robbers, perils from my countrymen, perils from the Gentiles, perils in the city, perils in the wilderness, perils in the sea, perils among false brothers; in labor and travail, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, and in cold and nakedness” (2 Corinthians 11:24-27). Yet he wrote Timothy’s letter after these experiences when he penned, “But godliness with contentment is great gain. For we brought nothing into the world, and we certainly can’t carry anything out. But having food and clothing, we will be content with that” (1 Timothy 6:6-8).

According to Paul, we have so much to be thankful for this year. Let us count our blessings with abundant gratitude and celebrate! ☀

Good News for Buyers as Price-Per-Square-Foot Drops

By Jenna Stutsman, licensed Real Estate Principal Broker in Oregon

Last month’s real estate statistics show some optimistic news for home buyers. The median price per square foot of homes sold last month took a dive to $268. The median hadn’t been that low since last March. While that may not be great news for a seller thinking of listing their house soon, that is awesome for buyers who feel they are getting priced out of the market. Sellers have been more willing to negotiate on price to make a deal work for an interested buyer. I see that every day. That doesn’t mean sellers are suddenly willing to accept insanely low offers, but if a buyer needs a small tweak here and there, a seller is more inclined to work with them.

If you have been thinking of buying, your first step is to contact a mortgage lender and get pre-approved. It never hurts to find out your buying power. You may get a nice surprise!

New on the Market — 1119 Ash St., Brownsville. Offered at $420,000.

I’m currently working with a client who is moving from out of state to Oregon and has needed extra clarification in the transaction around verbiage. Every state has different real estate practices, timelines, laws, and words. It can be quite confusing! Their latest question was about “Agent,” “Broker,” and “Principal Broker.” In their current state, when someone gets their real estate license, they become an “Agent.” Then, if they decide to take extra classes and a big test, they can become a “Broker.” That Broker can then create their own brokerage if they like, or just continue working under another brokerage with a higher accreditation. It’s essentially the same thing here, but our words are different. In Oregon, when you first get licensed, you become a “Broker.” And words “Agent” and “Broker” are often used interchangeably. Then, after a few years, if a Broker wants to get a higher accreditation, they take the classes and a big (and hard!) test to become a “Principal Broker.” A Principal Broker is more educated in real estate than a Broker, plus they can start their own brokerage if they wish. So the next time you see a Realtor’s business card, look for “Broker” vs. “Principal Broker.” You will now understand the difference! ☀

AMERICAN LEGION

The Legion's Part in Operation Evergreen

By an ordinary seaman

Folks around Brownsville often talk about the Christmas season appearing suddenly, like a flash of tinsel in the night. But for those of us with a keen eye for local tradition — and perhaps a lingering smell of pine resin on our hands — we know the true beginning of the holidays starts precisely when Home for the Holidays and the Festival of Trees commence.

This is no haphazard affair. Festival of Trees is a meticulous, almost military-level endeavor, cooked up and flawlessly executed by the dedicated ladies of the Brownsville Women's Study Club. It's a truly grand, organized machine, and we Legionnaires over at Travis Moothart Post 184 are proud, if slightly grumbling, cogs in its workings — a role we embrace with great good humor and maybe a little coffee-fueled defiance.

The real work starts early on Tuesday, before the first Saturday in December. The notorious Brownsville fog hangs low this time of year, thick and quiet, when the first pickup truck, dragging a trailer heavy with fragrant, fresh-cut evergreens, snuggles up to a parking space next to Library Park.

This is the call to action for the men of the Legion. Our section of "Operation Evergreen" is purely practical: a matter of grunt work and power-tool finesse. We're the boys who carefully unload those trees, heavy with the weight of the forest and the promise of future twinkling lights.

Our first order of business is the military haircut. We chainsaw an inch or two off the base — just to give the trees a fighting chance at a fresh drink — and then we trim the lower branches. Finally, in a whirlwind of expelled air that feels decidedly manly, we bring out the power blowers to clear off any stray debris. It's a loud, rough, and thoroughly satisfying task.

A few years back, our duties were even more Herculean. In addition to the cutting and blowing, the Legion had the weighty task of hauling those twenty-five green giants all over downtown. That duty has since been quietly handed off to another capable group. Now, the ladies of the Study Club vehemently deny that this transition is due to our "accumulating years," but a fellow can connect the dots. Frankly, though, a man can only argue so much when the alternative to lugging trees across town is more time spent with a steaming cup of coffee and the Women's Study Club's magnificent, glorious baked goods. Some battles, you see, are best left unfought. ☺

Brownsville Crew Joins Symphony Outreach at the Hult Center

By Barbara Andersen, Staff Writer

EUGENE — A contingent of Brownsville folks traveled south recently to offer their services as volunteer ushers at the Hult Center in Eugene. The occasion was a special concert by the Eugene

Paul and Diane Baxter along with Mary Brown came for the second program, appropriately attired in their Usher caps.

Symphony Orchestra, designed for the over 3,000 students who attended. This was one of the Symphony's major educational outreach programs. Symphony Volunteer Coordinator and Brownsville resident, Sandra Weingarten, wrangled us all into service for a fun day. ☺

DON'T AGONIZE, ORGANIZE

Episode Five: Inheriting 'Stuff'

By Sandra Beckwith, Staff Writer

Have you heard of the Great Wealth Transfer? Baby Boomers are set to begin an estimated $90 trillion transfer of assets, but along with that is also the stuff of their lives. There's no judgment in that, especially as I'm a Boomer, too!

The digital world happened well into our lives, and we inherited the belongings of folks who saw a significant shift in longevity. Most of us have boxes of photos, family china, and the silver from earlier generations. There's been an enormous change in family dinners, how we entertain, and what we give as wedding presents.

Yet, let's look a little deeper. As the middle class developed during the Industrial Revolution, we began to see mass-produced goods. We also shifted predominantly from rural life to urban life. What we owned, how it was stored, and how long it lasted have gone through many permutations.

Look with compassionate eyes; Boomers also inherited the fears and unresolved trauma of WWII and the Great Depression. Rationing. Going without. "I might need that." "I can reuse that." "It just needs to be fixed." Those thoughts echo for many of us born out of deprivation and uncertainty. Is it any wonder that we often have a lot of stuff?

Heirloom china like this once topped every wedding registry. Today, many younger generations are saying "no thanks" to formal place settings and other family collectibles.

What are we going to do with it? Who are we going to give it to? Are you going to deal with it while you're able, or dump it on the next generation? It can feel like dealing with a great deal of loss in either the belongings of loved ones no longer with us or ways of life that are shifting.

When we understand the why behind our habits and idiosyncrasies, then we have a better capacity to face them and move forward. Heirs, be kind and know there are very good reasons for the accumulation.

Help is available to you to make the process go much faster and more efficiently. Shall we begin? Contact me with any questions or ideas at sbeckwith1@icloud.com. ☺

CENTRAL LINN WRESTLING

Twentieth Year Celebration for the Central Linn Veterans Day Wrestling Tournament

By Tony Koontz, Sports Editor

As a former college athlete and longtime high school coach, I’ve been fortunate to experience some unforgettable sports moments. I’ve stood in Fenway Park, taken the field in front of 100,000 fans at Ohio State, and played on Central Linn’s own 1970 state championship baseball team. All were remarkable in their own way.

TONY KOONTZ

But nothing matches the energy and heart of a youth wrestling tournament on a Saturday in Oregon. And few are better than the 20th annual Central Linn Veterans Day Wrestling Tournament, held Saturday, Nov. 15.

Inside the Cobra Dome, three mats — each divided in half — ran six matches simultaneously from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. More than 400 wrestlers competed across the 6U, 8U, 10U, 12U, and 14U divisions, supported by a small army of officials, table workers, coaches, parents, grandparents, and friends. It was controlled chaos of the best kind and a sight worth putting on your bucket list.

What sets this tournament apart is its purpose: honoring veterans. Over nearly three decades, many Central Linn wrestlers and coaches have gone on to serve in the United States military. The traits built on the mat — discipline, teamwork, resilience, shared commitment — are the same traits that prepare young men and women for military service.

This year’s tournament honored the following veterans connected to Central Linn wrestling:

Lebanon Hospital Expands Food Backpack Program

LEBANON — The Lebanon Community Hospital Foundation is helping vulnerable patients meet their immediate nutrition needs through its expanding Food Backpack Program.

Since launching in May 2023, the program has distributed more than 150 backpacks to Samaritan Lebanon Community Hospital patients facing food insecurity, especially those who are unhoused, living without electricity, or unable to cook due to disability or limited mobility.

A grant initially funded the program and is now supported through donations to the Lebanon

Community Hospital Foundation. It is managed by Registered Dietitian Alix Slayter and operated through the hospital's Nutrition Services department.

For years, the hospital has partnered with Linn Benton Food Share to provide emergency food boxes to patients upon discharge. However, those boxes require access to safe cooking equipment — something not every patient has. The Food Backpack Program fills that gap by offering nutrient-dense, ready-to-eat items that require little or no preparation.

Each backpack includes ready-to-eat meals, freeze-dried entrees, tuna or chicken salad kits, cereal, peanut butter, trail mix, shelf-stable milk, and oral nutrition supplements. Backpacks also contain reusable silverware, bottled water, and information on community resources. Each pack provides about 6,300 calories and 275 grams of protein — enough nutrition for roughly three days.

The initiative began in the Inpatient, Emergency, Wound Care, and Hematology/Oncology departments. It has since expanded to Outpatient Nutrition Services, Samaritan Treatment and Recovery Services, and Cardiac and Pulmonary Rehab.

“The Food Backpack Program directly supports health and healing in some of our most vulnerable patients,” Slayter said. “We are grateful to the Lebanon Community Hospital Foundation for making this resource possible.”

Those interested in supporting the program may contact Foundation Executive Director Brandy O'Bannon at bobannon@samhealth.org or donate online at <https://www.samhealth.org/GiveLCHF>.

BOOK REVIEW

Escape with a 'Cli-Fi'

By Nancy Diltz, Staff Writer

As the Thanksgiving bustle subsides, you might be ready for a gripping story — and “Wild Dark Shore” (2025) by New York Times bestselling author Charlotte McConaghy delivers. This novel blends the author’s real-life experiences with mystery, suspense, and climate fiction, or “cli-fi,” a genre that explores how a changing climate affects life on earth. While cli-fi often paints a grim picture, it offers a powerful way to examine issues shaping our world now and in the future. The New York Public Library notes that this genre continues to grow as authors use climate shifts as the lens for storytelling.

The novel is set on a tiny, remote island called Shearwater near Antarctica. The island hosts a seed vault modeled on the real Svalbard Global Seed Vault in Norway, which stores millions of seeds at subzero temperatures to safeguard global food supplies in the event of a crisis. In McConaghy’s fictional version, rising sea levels, melting permafrost, and severe flooding threaten the research station and the island’s massive populations of seals, penguins, and seabirds.

As the situation worsens, researchers evacuate, leaving one caretaker and his three children to maintain the seed bank. When communication systems mysteriously fail, the small family becomes stranded. Their fight for survival intensifies when a near-drowned woman washes ashore after a shipwreck. As she recovers, the group must work together to protect the seeds and escape before the island disappears.

I found this story thoroughly engaging, especially in how McConaghy draws on her time at the Macquarie Island Research Station. To learn more about the real location, visit <https://www.antarctica.gov.au/macquarie-island-research-station>. You can also explore the Svalbard Global Seed Vault at <https://seedvaultvirtualtour.com>.

“Wild Dark Shore” is available at the Brownsville Library on Libby as an e-book or audiobook. 📖

NEW ENERGY

V2H – A New Way to Power Your Home

By Kayl Enders

New vehicle-to-home (V2H) technology lets an electric vehicle act as a large, mobile battery for your house when paired with a two-way (bidirectional) charger and a code-compliant transfer/backup system. In practical terms, a typical EV battery can power the average home for five days. With a vehicle-to-home system, you can run your home off-grid during power outages, keeping and using the power you generate on-site. If the outage lasts longer than five days, you can drive to an area with power and recharge your car battery to keep your home running for a while longer.

Local Brownsville resident Randy Enders is exploring this setup with his 12-kW solar array, a bidirectional charger, and a critical-load sub panel. His project concept may use a Ford F-150 Lightning or Silverado EV with bidirectional charging. Not all electric cars come equipped with bidirectional-ready chargers. That will likely change as technology evolves.

The Case for Electric Vehicles

If a household replaces a 20-mpg gasoline vehicle driving 12,000 miles/year, that’s 600 gallons of gasoline avoided. At $4/gal, that’s $2,400/year in fuel cost avoided. An efficient electric vehicle charging on grid power would use about 4,200 kWh/year. At $0.14/kWh retail, charging at home costs $588/year, yielding $1,812/year net savings before maintenance differences. The maintenance costs of an electric car are lower. Routine maintenance involves tire rotation and topping up the windshield wiper fluid. Oil changes are avoided altogether.

AI-GENERATED IMAGE BY SHARON K. BANKS

A typical bidirectional charger and installation (excluding the EV) costs about $6,000–$8,500; payback time may vary depending on the system and options you select, as well as what, if any, incentives are available at the time. Even without incentives, these systems may make economic sense. The cost of this system may be less than the cost of a whole house generator and does not make noise or produce noxious fumes. It gives you the ability to maintain power during extended outages.

To calculate the system’s payback, divide the system’s cost by its annual savings. The example above is $8,500/$1,812 = 4.69 years. If incentives ever exist again, the payback is even shorter. If gas prices change, you will need to recalculate.

Electric cars, depending on the make and model, can cost more or less than gas-powered vehicles. Typical new base model electric vehicles cost $30-73K, which is very close to and sometimes less than gas-powered alternatives. As electric cars become more common and time passes, used electric cars will be readily available at lower prices on the open market.

Why this matters in Oregon

With increasing outage risks and grid-induced wildfires, which pose a growing threat to homeowners, and with evolving net-metering programs that may pay less than retail for excess power you generate, keeping solar energy stored in a home battery or an EV can give you the ability to have your own energy supply. This can help you meet your energy needs and prevent losing heat, cooling, or the food in your freezer during extended outages. 🌞

If paired with a solar system that generates enough energy to power the home and the electric vehicle, a homeowner may not have to pay for power again and can avoid fuel costs. A homeowner would have to factor in the cost of the solar upgrade and, if any, the incremental cost of the electric vehicle to determine the payback period for their situation. To calculate the solar payback period, divide the net system cost by the annual savings.

BROWNSVILLE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Home for the Holidays

Brownsville Prepares for a Full Weekend of Christmas Festivities

Brownsville is getting ready to welcome the Christmas season with a packed lineup of holiday events during the first week of December. From twinkling lights and carols to craft markets and decorated storefronts, the community will offer something for all ages as residents and visitors gather to celebrate together.

The annual Tree Lighting will take place on Friday evening, Dec. 5, on Spaulding Avenue, bringing neighbors downtown for music, candles, and the ceremonial lighting. A special guest will light the community tree, which will be revealed during the event.

Throughout Friday and Saturday, holiday markets and craft bazaars will be held across town, including the American Legion Craft Bazaar, the Rec Center Holiday Bazaar, the Assembly of God Holiday Bazaar, and the Art Center's Holiday Art Market. Local vendors, artists, and makers will showcase handmade gifts, decor, and seasonal goods.

The Brownsville Women's Study Club will once again host the Festival of Trees, with decorated trees displayed in local businesses and community locations. Children can visit Santa at 128 Spaulding Ave. on both days from noon to 2 p.m., and the Brownsville Library's annual book sale begins Dec. 4 and continues to Dec. 13.

Residents are also encouraged to participate in the 2025 Holiday Lights Contest, sponsored by Pacific Power. Homes and businesses can register to be included on this year's Holiday Lights Map, which will be available online Dec. 5 for community voting. Sign up by Dec. 1 to be included at <https://www.historicbrownsville.com/holiday-lights-contest>.

With familiar traditions and new touches throughout town, Brownsville's Home for the Holidays weekend promises a warm start to the season. Full details and updates will be published in our the Dec. 4 issue. 🌟
